The WE House is a training and counselling center for women workers – A place for exchange, fun, learning and getting help

Supported by:

Implemented by:

The WE house is supported by three organizations:

- The Women Union Network, a network of women unionists, who know your struggles.
- The Solidarity Center, the largest U.S.-based international workers' rights organization.
- The FABRIC project of the GIZ supporting garment factory workers in Asia. FABRIC opened similar Women Centers in Bangladesh and Myanmar with great success.

What we offer:

- Trainings every Sunday on issues related to labour rights – free of charge.
- Access to counselling services to support you with issues you may face at work and at home – free of charge.
- A space for exchange. A place to be where you can meet, exchange, learn and build worker solidarity.
- No need to spend any money. We are open daily from 9 am to 6 pm. Also on weekends.

Why are we doing this?

Because we believe in labour rights and gender equality. We believe that everyone deserves fair and dignified working and living conditions.
